Storekeepers' Convention On At Dayton

Representatives of The National Cash Register Company Attend Annual Gathering of Salesmen at the Factory

Factory of The National Cash Register Co., Dayton, O., where a cash register is made every 1½ minutes of each working day

Representatives of the National Cash Register Company, to the number of 180, from points all over the United States and Canada are meeting this week at the Dayton factory. There they are studying the latest and best store systems and methods of handling transactions between customers and clerks.

A little later other groups of salesmen, including our local representative, will attend similar conventions at Dayton. For this is the annual convention season when we bring together our salesmen, so that each may get the benefit of the ideas and experience of all.

The National Cash Register Company's representatives are more than salesmen; they are experts on Store Systems.

In 1910, by installing improved methods of handling sales, they increased the profits of 129,154 retail storekeepers. Over $50,000,000 a day are handled by National Cash Registers.

In their annual conventions at Dayton our salesmen interchange ideas and study the newest, most improved business methods. They suggest improvements in registers to meet storekeepers' needs; for all of the important practical improvements are made in direct response to the suggestions or demands of storekeepers.

Our representatives also attend "post graduate courses" at the company's School for Salesmen. Here they are taught by the leading store system experts of America the best ways of handling cash and credit sales and all other transactions that take place in a store.

The school idea is carried throughout the entire factory with its 5763 employees. Each one is taught the best way of doing his work. As a result the N. C. R. has built up a force of skilled workers which could not be duplicated anywhere.

That is why this company can guarantee to furnish the best cash register for the storekeeper's needs at the lowest price. That is why the output of the factory has been doubled in the last four years with only 9 per cent. more employees. The storekeeper gets the benefit of these economies.

The monthly output of the factory is over 10,000 registers, ranging in price from $5 to $765—a cash register for every kind of retail store, large or small.

Monthly sales average $1,800,000. October sales broke all records, totaling $2,300,000; the orders coming from 19 countries all over the civilized world.

129,154 storekeepers bought National Cash Registers in 1910, an increase in sales of 20 per cent. over 1909. And the demand is increasing so fast that new machinery is now being installed in the factory to prepare for an output of 155,000 registers in 1911.

E. F. Du Charme, our local representative, has had the benefit of the annual conventions and the N. C. R. School in the past. He will go to the factory shortly for our 1911 convention. His increased knowledge of up-to-date business systems and methods of handling transactions between clerks and customers, gained through contact with other system experts, will be freely tendered to any storekeeper. Send for him and let him suggest ways to increase your profits for 1911.

DOCTORING FOR SICK MINDS

Bad Spelling Cured By Scientific Study—First Aid for Mental Wrecks. Unique Work of A Psychological Clinic.

By Arthur Holmes, Asst. Director Psychological Class, University of Penn.

THERE are 100,000 imbeciles or idiot children in the United States in this class one-tenth of all children are below par mentally.

Already in the public schools of Philadelphia 400 such children have been found and are under special observation. How many of them are being deprived of any education because of their lack of mentality and therefore roam the streets at will, no one knows. Certain it is that every hamlet, every village, every town and every large city has its quota of children designated as "foolish," "silly," "not all there," or "lacking in the upper story." Heretofore they have been thought of as objects of special visitations of providence, accepted as burdens by their parents or by the community and no special effort made or even thought of for the alleviation of their condition.

In this wide field, the psychological clinic finds its unique function. It instructs popular opinion and by opening the door of opportunity compels the guardians of such children to take the proper means of bringing them up to the full capacity of which they are capable. In almost every case this is at least to the point of self support and assuredly in every case the saving of the individual from untold suffering.

A fine, healthy boy, 14 years old, was brought by a grade teacher in March, 1898, to Dr. Lightner Witmer at the University of Pennsylvania for advice concerning his chronic bad spelling. The teacher assumed that psychology should be able to find the cause of the failing and advise ways for remedying it. From that time the psychological clinic has continued its work.

The boy was three years behind his proper school grade because of his extremely poor reading and spelling, though in other respects he was normal. He read "was" as "saw," "weather" as "water." His uncertainty of single letters led Dr. Witmer to look for some defect of vision. The suspicion was confirmed by having several fingers held before the boy's face. At a little distance he was unable to distinguish the number with certainty. He then said that words frequently doubled under his pen. An oculist found that, though each eye alone saw normally, the power to fix the two upon a single the great army of ne'er-do-wells of beggars. In either case he becomes a threat and burden to the community. The opposite method of treatment usually springs from the ambition of the parents. Knowing the best sides of their children, they are painfully loth to believe the child of their ambitious hopes cannot only never realize them, but actually must be assigned to that fearful class known as "weak-minded." Seizing upon the child's marvelous memory for obscure and detached details, or upon its wonderful musical ability, the parents dwell upon these qualities. To their minds it must be laziness, or inattention, or carelessness that prevents advance at school. They press the poor, weak brain to tasks entirely beyond it. They harass and torment the child until high grade imbecility falls to the abysmal gloom of idleness.—Exclusive service Survey Press Bureau.

UNLIKE THE BOOKS, brought an abundant crop, she refused him scornfully. Dismissing him with a proud gesture, just as they do in the books, she drew herself up to her full height, and turned haughtily away. She intended to walk off in a proud dignity, but caught her foot on the Oriental?—(Note: We put that question mark there to satisfy the neighbors, and because this didn't happen in the books.)—The Oriental? rug, and sprawled all over the floor! And the lover, instead of slinking away crushed, laughed! "The ideals in life," wrote Daysey Mayme in her diary that night, "come crashing down thick and fast!"
